

Fashion Coming Into The New Year

Check out what's going to be hot in 2016 in our article.

The New York Times

Thom Browne's '20s-something

Dressed to depress

The designer nodded to the 1920s for his fall/winter 2016 collection, showing overcoats, tartans and checks, neckties, ribbon trim, pearl necklaces and petite purses. Elsewhere, Tommy Hilfiger's "T.H. Atlantic" pulled into port (of note: his paste and pearl drop earrings) and Jeremy Scott went a little bit country, a little bit Ren & Stimpy.

Slide, slide, slippity slide

See the model Romee Strijd transform before and after hair and makeup at Jeremy Scott. Reimagined check for fall?

Check. So far, Suno, Victoria Beckham and Jason Wu have offered their takes.

It seems the Grammys red carpet was a bit underwhelming. Here's Vanessa Friedman on the "muted night for fashion."

Statement-making

Zac Posen's "model lineup on Monday night was comprised almost entirely of gorgeous models of color like Aya Jones, Aamito Lagum, Cindy Bruna, Riley Montana and Grace Bol," according to Fashionista. His inspiration for the collection was Princess Elizabeth of Toro; "otherwise, there was no mention of the casting decision" in the designer's show notes.

Check out this new HOT style of dress